

METHOD, SYSTEM, AND APPARATUS FOR REMOTE INTERACTIONS

ABSTRACT

A method of communicating physical human interactions over a communications network can include detecting physical movement of a user, generating data specifying the physical movement, and determining at least one action indicated by the data. The method further can include transmitting the action over a communications network to a receiving system and simulating the action in the receiving system.